Malay Cuisine: Blending Spice and Culture

Rich in spices such as kaffir lime, turmeric, ginger, black pepper, coriander and lemongrass, Malay is a hub of different cultures, each of which has brought in different flavours to create a distinct and vibrant cuisine. Along with so many different culinary variations, we take a look at some of the best Malay cuisine from across Malaysia and give a taste of a few dishes from the rest of the peninsula.

Malay cuisine is known for its vibrant and diverse flavours, eclectic influences and rich history. Generally, Malay cuisine refers to food from Malaysia, Singapore, Brunei, Indonesia, Mindanao and Southern Thailand. It is within these areas that food enthusiasts will find some of the most interesting and complex flavours in the world. Malaysia specifically is comprised of 13 states, and is home to predominantly Malays, Chinese and Indians, but the population is a wonderful hub of cultures and ethnic groups, making the gastronomy here an exciting blend of spices, flavours and cooking techniques. Historically, Malaysia was part of an incredibly successful spice trade, most records of which date back to the 15th Century.

The welcoming and open-minded nature of Malay culture has meant that the arrival of different nationalities has been portrayed through their cuisine, with ingredient choices taking influence from the North and East especially. Chinese influences can be seen in the use of soy sauce and noodles throughout Malaysia, with northern parts of the country also taking characteristics from Thailand, displayed through the use of lemongrass and ginger. Southern parts of Malaysia tend to have richer sauces, and although there are so many different attributes within Malay cuisine, the peninsula has accumulated all of the best parts of neighbouring culinary attributes and combined them to form a distinct cultural identity.

Many people in Malaysia are of Muslim faith, so although meat is heavily used throughout the cuisine, you will not find as many recipes using pork as you will find beef, lamb and goat, for example. Most popular dishes that do contain pork have beef counterparts. There is of course an abundance of seafood in all Malay cuisine, the peninsula utilising its fishing coasts to the fullest. The light sauces and tangy spices included in many seafood dishes compliment the lightness of the meat perfectly. As for vegetarians, eating across Malaysia can be a challenge, as meat and seafood can be difficult to avoid. Even in vegetable dishes, the bases and stocks often contain meat.

There are however an array of delectable fruits to be savoured across Malaysia. Bananas here are cooked in their skins to perfection, guavas are healthy and bursting with vitamin C, and for those more adventurous types, durian is a lesser appreciated option. These football-sized fruits are green and thick-skinned, covered with spikes. Somewhat foul smelling on the outside, the inside reveals seeds and a pale yellow flesh which has a distinct taste.

Read the following passage and answer the questions that follow.

Sudirman ‘The Singing Legend’

Dato’ Sudirman Haji Arshad DIMP, JMN, AMN (25 May 1954 – 22 February 1992) was a Malaysian singer and songwriter. He was known as the 'Singing Lawyer', the 'People's Singer' and the 'Elvis of Malaysia'. Sudirman was born on 25 May 1954 in Temerloh, Pahang as the youngest of seven children born to Hj Arshad Hassan and RamlahDahlan (the first stateswoman in Pahang during the 1950s). His passion for singing and entertaining started at a very young age, when his siblings and neighbours would happily let him entertain them.

After turning down a scholarship to further his studies in medicine, he studied law instead and received his degree from the University of Malaya. He was called to the bar and became a practicing lawyer. He married KamariahJamaluddin in 1981, but divorced her three years later.

The Sudirman's voice was instantly recognisable every time one of his songs is played on local radio or television. His unique talents had helped him to win many local competitions from Bintang RTM Best Singer (1976) to Muzik-Muzik TV3 Best Performer and BeritaHarian Popularity contest Most Popular Artist. He topped Malaysian, Brunei and Indonesia charts with songs such as "MerisikKhabar", "MilikSiapakahGadisIni" and "Salam Terakhir". Even today, his songs are popularly played especially during National Day and Eid Fitr.

Sudirman was also the first Malaysian singer to perform at The Paddock, Hilton Kuala Lumpur in 1983 and was the singing ambassador for companies such as Proton, Malaysia Airlines, Honda Cup. He was also honoured pioneer card member with Hong Leong Bank. He was known for his versatility and sang Malay, Indian and Chinese songs with outstanding choreography.

On 15 April 1986, Sudirman held an open air concert on the Chow Kit Road, which was the first time ever that a street concert drew a 100,000-strong crowd on a Monday night. It jammed the stretch of JalanTuanku Abdul Rahman, Jalan Raja Muda to Jalan Raja Alang.
Malaysian English tabloid, The Star, wrote that "Kuala Lumpur came to a standstill and it had nothing to do with the recession, but with one man, Malaysia's top entertainer, an electrifying performance and most memorable night".

While singing in Butterworth, Sudirman suffered a stroke and collapsed on stage. It was reported that Sudirman's stroke was the result of a cerebrovascular disease. He died at 4 a.m. on 22 February 1992 at the age of 37 in his sister's (DatinRadiah) house in Kuala Lumpur. Hundreds took part in his funeral procession. First, his remains were sent to his hometown in Temerloh, Pahang. Later, he was laid to rest at Chengal Muslim Cemetery, Temerloh, near the graves of his parents.
